

A DRUNKARD ON FIRE.

Dr. Nott, in his Lectures, gives the following account of a young man, about 25 years of age:

"He had been an habitual drinker for many years. I saw him about nine o'clock in the evening on which it happened; he was then as full as usual—not drunk, but full of liquor. About eleven o'clock the same evening, I was called in to see him. I found him literally roasted, from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet! He was found in a blacksmith shop just across from where he had been. The owner, all of a sudden, discovered an extensive light in his shop, as though the whole building was in one general flame.—He ran with great precipitancy, and, on throwing open the door, discovered a man standing erect in the midst of a widely extended silver-colored flame, bearing, as he described it, exactly the appearance of the burning candle in the midst of its own flame. He seized him (the drunkard,) by the shoulder, and jerked him to the door, upon which the flame was instantly extinguished. There was no fire in the shop, neither was there a possibility of any fire having been communicated to him from any external source.—It was purely a case of spontaneous ignition. A general sloughing soon came on, and his flesh was consumed or removed in the pressing, leaving the bones and a few of the larger blood vessels; the blood, nevertheless rallied around the heart, and maintained the vital spark until the thirteenth day, when he died, not only the most loathsome, ill-featured, and dreadful picture that was ever presented to human view, but his shrieks, his groans, and his lamentations, also, were enough to read a heart of adamant. He complained of no pain of body; his flesh was gone. He said he was suffering the torments of hell—that he was just upon the threshold, and would soon enter its dismal caverns; and in this frame of mind he gave up the ghost. Oh! the death of a drunkard! Well, may it be said to beggar all description! I have seen other drunkards die, but never in a manner so awful and affecting."

"If you had always avoided rum," said a wealthy, though not intelligent grocer to his intemperate neighbor, "your early habits of industry and intellectual abilities would have placed you in my station, and you would now ride in your own carriage."

"And if you had never sold rum for me to buy," replied the bacchanal, "you would have been my driver."

The one price Tavern.—A tavern was kept some years since at the mouth of the Cumberland river, where many persons stopped to get a boat, up or down. It was conducted on the insurance principle.—On registering your name, you paid ten dollars down. If a boat came the moment after, bound your way, you reclaimed no part of your money; and on the contrary, no more was exacted of you, if you had to remain a month, which in former years, at certain seasons, was sometimes the case. The landlord kept a good tavern, was a jolly old fellow, and got rich.

Cheap Matrimony.—A Baptist clergyman in New York, a few days since, performed the marriage service for a happy couple, and was rewarded by the bridegroom at his departure, with a small parcel, carefully done up, which, on examination, was found to contain four cents.

A Nice Question Settled.—The Debating Society of Spring Garden recently, after a very animated discussion on the question, "Whether a gal has a right to say no before she is axed," decided, by nearly a unanimous vote, that "she haint."

Glass.—It is difficult to what perfection the manufacture of glass may be brought, and to what purposes the article may yet be applied. The balance spring of a chronometer is now made of glass, as a substitute for steel, and possesses a greater degree of elasticity and a greater power of resisting the alternations of heat and cold. A chronometer with a glass balance spring was sent to the North Sea, and exposed to a competition with nine other chronometers and the result of the experiment was a report in favor of the chronometer with the glass spring.

Bilious Cholera.—The following recipe has never been known to fail, it is said:—Take, say a fourth of a pound plug of common chewing tobacco, tear it well to pieces and put it into a vessel and pour on it a sufficiency of boiling water to moisten and swell the leaves, lay it on a cloth and apply it to the seat of pain.

Consumption.—An officer in the British East Indian service, far gone in a consumption, is stated to have been perfectly cured by the inhalations of the vapor of melted rosin; in which practice he persevered, night and morning, for several months.

A soldier who was wounded in battle, set up a terrible yell. An Irishman, who laid near, with both legs shot off, immediately sung out, "Bnd luck to the likes of ye, do ye think that nobody is kilt but yourself?"

The following gentlemen are announced by their friends as candidates for the Office of Tax Collector, at the ensuing election:

CLEANS AND PURIFY THE BODY.

THE application of the principle of Pur- gation being allowed to be one of the greatest utility in the cure and prevention of diseases, it is of the greatest consequence to ascertain what medicine is capable of producing the desired effect, in the easiest, and at the same time in the most effectual manner.

BRANDRETH'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL PILLS remove all noxious accumulations and purify and invigorate the blood, and their good effects are not counterbalanced by any inconvenience, being composed entirely of vegetables they do not expose those who use them to danger; and their effects are as certain as they are salutary; they are daily and safely administered to infancy, youth, manhood and old age, and to women in the most critical and delicate circumstances. They do not disturb or shock the animal functions, but restore their ordinary and re-established health.
